TIGER TOPICS

Our game against Gloucester is one of the most keenly anticipated and I know that today we can look forward to a good game between two strong sides. Gloucester will be without their skipper Don Rutherford, who is on duty at Twickenham against the 'All Blacks'.

We welcome back to the Leicester side John Quick, Mike Brownhill and Kevin Andrews from the injured list.

NOTES OF THE LAWS

Law 15 on the scrummage is possibly the most complicated of the 35 laws in the book. From the moment the ball is put into the scrum and until it is heeled there are upwards of 30 offences which can be committed.

A referee doesn't need a pair of specs but several pairs of eyes—one set in an unusual place to see even half of these!

The law sets out exactly how a front row shall bind and his must be firmly and continuously by all three men. The hooker is not allowed to lower his body or twist and should be able to stand up if his props were removed.

It also states exactly how the scrum half shall put in the ball and where this should land in the scrum—and it is half way between the two front rows! He must also stand one yard away from the scrum and not let the hooker take the ball out of his hands.

Whilst the ball is in the scrum any player leaving this must retire behind the scrum, that is, the hindmost foot of the back row. The only player allowed in front of the hindmost foot is the scrum half and he must stay behind the ball at all times until it is out. To be in the scrum a player must be binding with hand and arm, not just resting his hand on the back of one of his own players in the scrum.

Where relevant the same laws apply to a loose scrum and in any scrum it is an offence for a player to handle the ball or to kneel or fall, or cause the scrum to collapse in any way even by jumping on the top of the players in the scrum.

One last point—a scrum can only occur in the field of play, i.e., not in "In-goal", which is why a push over try can be scored and the ball handled in the "scrum". It follows, therefore, that the offside law and players kneeling, etc., do not operate when the scrum or that part of it crosses the goal line.
