PRE-SEASON TOURS: - SOUTH AFRICA 1994

The traditional Rugby Tour, usually at Easter or the end of a season, where the number of points consumed was more significant than the result of matches has long gone. In its place is a Tour which becomes an integral part of the pre-season training programmes; an opportunity to assess fitness levels, to try new moves or styles of play and to welcome new players into the Club.

Over the past few seasons GLOUCESTER have travelled to DIJK in HOLLAND and TREVISO in ITALY to prepare for the coming League Seasons. Although the emphasis is rather more serious nowadays there is nevertheless the thrill of playing Rugby overseas, of visiting a new country and meeting new people. The GLOUCESTER CLUB has been looking forward to their visit to CAPE TOWN for several months now, to visiting a proud Rugby Nation, seeing the sights and meeting the people.

Our thanks go out to the host Clubs: HAMILTON, MINERTON, BELVILLE and STELLENBOSCH UNIVERSITY, we look forward to our games and in sharing your hospitality. Perhaps one day we shall get the opportunity to return your kindnesses in ENGLAND.

Thanks also to the RITZ PROTEA HOTEL for looking after our "home" comforts during our stay.

BARRIE CORLESS
Director of Rugby

NOT SO MUCH A RUGBY CLUB, MORE A WAY OF LIFE

Gloucester is an ancient City of some 100,000 souls, not far from the Welsh border, famous for three things. It has one of the most beautiful Cathedrals in Europe, a wonderfully restored Victorian Docks complex - and Gloucester RFC. Indeed, from September until May each year, a good proportion of that 100,000 people seem to eat, sleep and breathe Rugby.

It's been the same for over 120 years, ever since an exiled Londonder, one Fred Hartley, arrived in Gloucester and immediately founded the Rugby Club. Within a few years the club had supplied its first International players, and in 1891 moved to the Kingsholm Ground, now famous from Edinburgh to Brisbane as one of world's great Club grounds. Just five weeks after the ground opened it staged its first representative match - Western Counties v The Midlands - and hosted an International match between England and Wales as early as 1900.

Against that background, it isn't really surprising that Gloucester RFC has, on occasion made a significant impact on the game itself. Tommy Voyce, who played for England and the British Lions in South Africa in the 1920's, actually invented wing forward play. The late, and much-missed Danie Craven once wrote of him as 'the blond destroyer with a smile', and stated that he would be one of the first names he would write down when picking his all-time great World XV. 'Dai' Gent of Gloucester, at around the turn of the Century, was the man who separated the two half backs into distinct disciplines.

More recently, Gloucester players who have toured South Africa, with their country or the British Lions, include the great prop forward, Mike Burton, flanker John Watkins and outside half Tom Palmer. Among players still active are 'Iron Man' Mike Teague and Scottish International back row man, Ian Smith.

Back at Kingsholm, South African sides have always received a traditional Gloucester warm welcome - on and off the field. A couple of years ago, Gloucester beat a strong Transvaal side, and were the only English or Welsh side to do so on that tour. Had a few kicks not gone astray, Gloucester would have been just as inhospitable to the South African Barbarians just twelve months later.

Gloucester is a proud club, and one to be reckoned with. Don't let anyone tell you that the home of English Rugby is at Twickenham or anywhere else. It's at Kingsholm, under the shadow of Gloucester Cathedral. If you're ever in the English West Country, drop in and see for yourself.
