H. L. Terrington is now available and has played v. Stroud this week. He is known to Gloucester followers as a member of the Universities Athletic Union and Leicester teams, and it is anticipated that he will help Gloucester's midfield problem. Vivian Davies is indisposed and a Trial was given on Thursday to D. Humphris, a member of a well-known Gloucester rugby family. Gordon Hudson helped out at centre against Stroud, a position in which his strong and forceful running had much to do with the successful results on tour last season.

It is to be hoped sincerely that the frequent injuries which disorganised the team last season will not recur, but already several players have been temporarily unfit. It was particularly unfortunate that R. Parry, after such a long run without missing a game, should have been injured in a non-club game.

W. Moreland comes in for to-day's game, and Hudson remains at centre with M. Baker (who is now in the R.A.F) on his wing. With Chamberlayne not available, H. J. Meadows, who has not yet returned to his teaching engagement at Canterbury, plays as hooker.
