GLOUCESTER A V. BATH A.

HONOURS EASY AT KINGSHOLM.

By 3 p.m. we had all taken our seats and were watching the door of the gym expectantly. At 3.5 the door opened about two inches and an eye peeped out. But on catching sight of us it at once withdrew and the door was opened wide enough to allow 75 per cent of a human face to protrude.

Still not liking this, at 3.8 a late comer sprinted into the gym, and at once convinced the owner of the face that we were quite respectable. So, at last, at 3.13 the door was flung back and the teams came out to perform before us.

The performance consisted of absolute nil-nil equality between them. If Gloucester got one end of the ball there was sure to be Bath on the other end. The ball was shared so equally that for convenience a handle at each end might have been provided.

By the action of the ball, if free kicks had been given the honour of kicking would have been equally shared.

And I feel sure that if any free kicks had been given the honour of free kicks both sides would have been equally shared.

And two snaps of Benbow, Gloucester's custodian, I must find room for. Gloucester's little Jacky Clift (if that's the right name) poking his way through the opposition.
